

Our replenishers are proud of the services they provide, and they like to advertise their goods. As soon as they're alongside you wait for word of the most important cargo of all... for it is often these ships which bring our mail to us, and we're anxious to hear from home. In his excitement one of your shipmates falls over the side. Within minutes the helicopter fishes him out of the drink. Then replenishment goes on as before.

