

ADMIRALS

VICE ADMIRAL FREDERICK C. SHERMAN, U. S. NAVY

REAR ADMIRAL POWNALL, U. S. NAVY

The mysteries of our Myths are as startling as the futilities of fate. The U.S.S. Lexington has played host to Admirals throughout her service in the war zones. Only on two occasions was an Admiral's pennant not flying above the island structure . . . and only on two occasions did the Valiant Lady suffer damage at the hands of the enemy. Both hits occurred while the ship was without a Flag.

The Flagship Lexington is proud that it was chosen to be the home of Admirals. The honor thus bestowed upon her lent her new dignity and increased her fighting efficiency. Her Admirals were many. Shown on these pages are a few of the great men who gave of their services from the Flag deck of the Carrier "L."
