

OE

When the establishment laid down the rules, and issued technical rates their knowledge and tools, they ran short of tools, and the ET's were missed, because being better, they were last on the list.
But because of their importance to the fleet, they were given more knowledge for the great job they were to meet.

Radios, radar, and all the electronics about us, couldn't function properly without us, and when other divisions need a helping hand, they know they can count on the electronic Fix-it man, because when there's a job to be filled, and others can't fill it, it takes an electronic technician to handle the billet.
For any given task, we handle confidently, we can hack it, for our minds are stronger, anything hard, we do immediately, and the impossible takes just a little longer.

ET's
"JC and the Boys"

