TO THOSE WHO FILL OUR THOUGHTS MOST

Many thanks for your messages from home, for your uncomplaining faithfulness, but most of all for praying for our safe return.

They also serve who only stand and wait

Milton

Our story begins on 1 December 1966 with

a kiss...

a wave...

a fear...

"Anchors Aweigh" ...

and our cruise has begun.

The days ahead were filled with much excitement and kept us all quite busy at...

UNDERWAY REFUELING

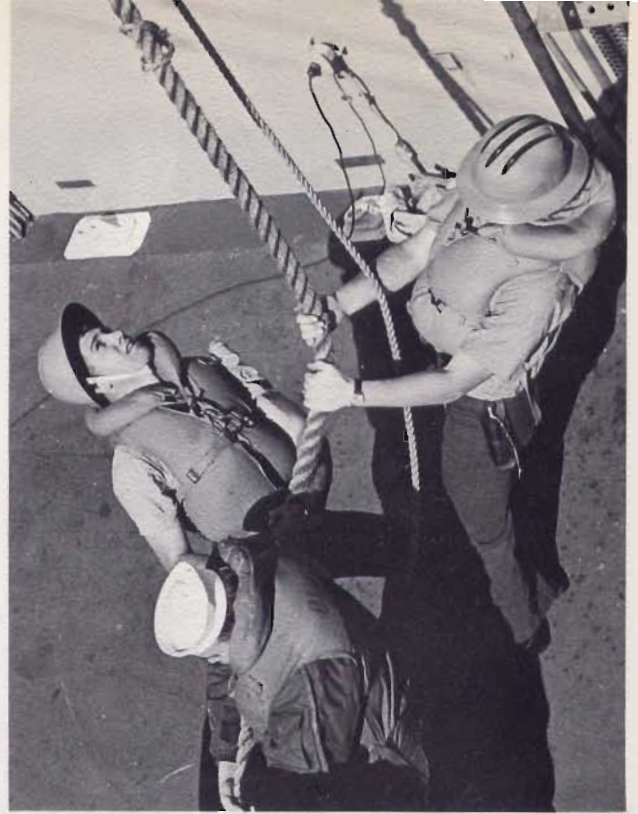

Mr. Pidgeon takes it alongside.

About every third day, late in the afternoon, we refueled. It's tough work and each man has his own job to do. Even after the hookup is complete and "commence pumping" is passed all hands keep a sharp eye out for possible danger.

PERSONNEL TRANSFER

is an exacting skill we perfected quite well. It takes real teamwork to transfer people between the 100 feet of ocean that separates two ships.

REARMING

Although we rearmed only once, it was heavy, cold and wet work. Each projectile weighs 70 lbs and after handling over 300 we had put in a full days work.

REPLENISHMENT

We brought aboard both fresh foods and dry provisions. They came aboard by some of the most modern methods, hi-line or VERTREP, but once aboard it was good old Norwegian Steam that got the goods stored below.

HELO OPERATIONS

"Now set Flight Quarters to ..." was heard many times each day while on station. We conducted over 400 landings and launchings and over 200 refuelings and our efforts resulted in numerous "well dones" from the aircraft crews we worked with.

V.I.P. VISITS

On January 10th Under Secretary of the Navy Honorable Robert H. B. Baldwin accompanied by the Commander of the U.S. SEVENTH Fleet VADM John J. Hyland visited the ship. They were briefed on the ships' operations and given a tour of CIC. This was the first of many visits paid to MAHAN by high ranking officials and officers during the cruise.

Commander Cruiser Destroyer Force, Pacific, RADM Freeman came aboard on May 6th while we were being relieved on station by USS LONG BEACH (CAG(N)9). RADM Freeman talked with officers about the U. S. role in Viet Nam and later addressed the crew on the general announcing system.

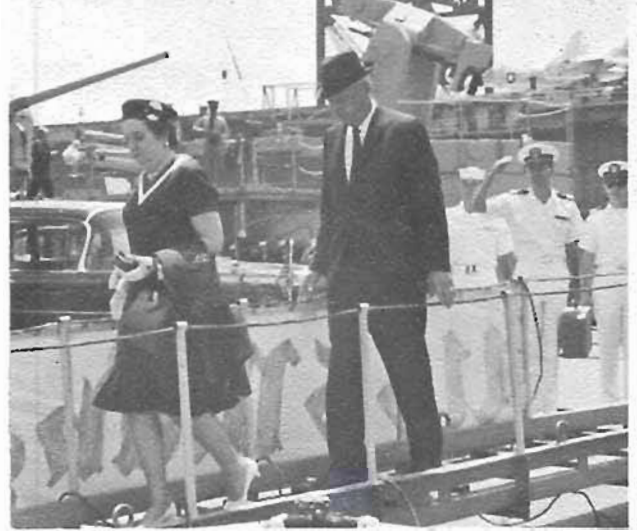

Our guest list was further increased by a visit from the Commander of the U. S. FIRST Fleet Vice Admiral Bernard F. Roeder. VADM Roeder's command consists of training ships off the West coast of the U. S. for combat in Viet Nam.

Lt. General Momyer, Commander of the U. S. SEVENTH Air Force in Viet Nam also visited us, MAHAN worked quite closely with the Air Force and General Momyer strengthening Navy - Air Force understanding and cooperation.

CDR Evans leads Dr. Finn Larson of the Department of Defense and advisor to the Secretary of Defense McNamara on a tour of the ship. RADM Mark Woods, Commander of Cruiser-Destroyer Flotilla NINE and two other officials were also our guests this day. All of our visitors were given briefings and tours, and as can be seen interest was quite high.

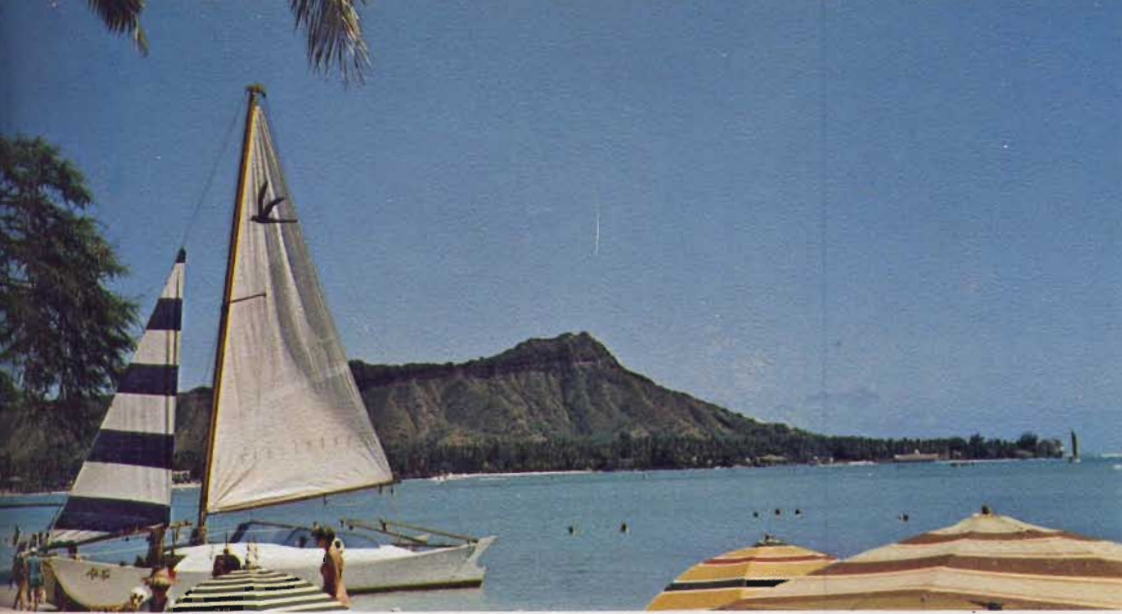

On May 16 we embarked 18 high ranking official guests which included the U.S. Ambassador to Japan Alexi Johnson and Commander of U.S. Naval Forces, Japan RADM Frank Johnson to ride the ship to the Black Ship Festival. Later Mr. Johnson and RADM Johnson met with the mayor of Shimoda.

The ship spent three days in Chin Hai, Korea and hosted a visit by Commander U.S. Naval Forces, Korea RADM D. G. Irvine. RADM Irvine and his Air Force and Army guests were quite impressed with MAHANS' capabilities in anti-air warfare.

Diamond Head, Hawaii's greatest landmark.

"ALOHA NUI"

Thousands pay homage to the men lost on the U.S.S. Arizona.

The S.S. Lurline -- some people have to pay.

Statue of Kamehameha,
the great Hawaiian king.

HISTORIC LANDMARKS

including the "blow hole" and the statue of King Kamehameha are two of many in Hawaii. The center of attention during our brief stay was the Arizona Memorial as we helped observe the 25th anniversary of the Japanese attack here.

BEACHES AND SURFING

are two of the islands' biggest attractions. Sailors from all over the world venture to famous Waikiki to participate in or just watch the "fun in the sun."

PRETTY NATIVE GIRLS

make Hawaii a real island paradise. They can say "Aloha" in their native dance, song or just by being pretty. As for the old man, he's just pounding poi.

Some of us enjoyed local culture in colorful Philippine musical.

the philippines

Typical rural scene near Subic — Filipino farmer and smiling daughter, water buffalo and rice field.

THE RUGGED TOWN OF OLONGAPO

is filled with hard working people and rustic buildings. We saw Olongapo more than any other port and we left with mixed emotions about our next return.

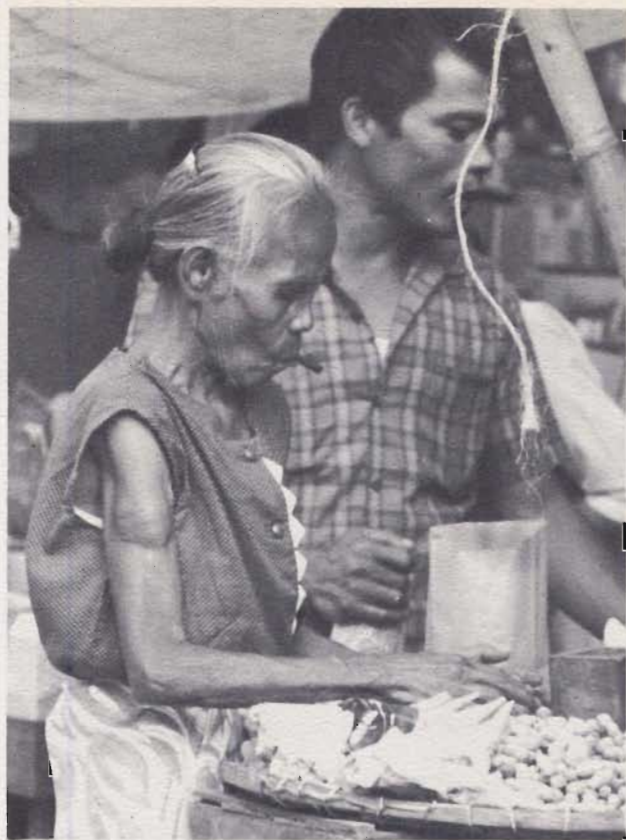

ONE STREET OF LIBERTY

Rizal Ave., from one end to the other, was all we saw - everything else was out of bounds! Walking on those almost non-existent sidewalks was bad enough, but when you rode in a Jeepney both life and limb were in danger.

SOME OF THE PEOPLE were quite anxious to see us arrive, while others could care less. Hostesses and bartenders put out the welcome mat, but others were either too young or too old to care about us.

"Ah, so!"

Top photo: Night life in world's largest city is second to none. Instead of "Gay Parcc," it's now "Terrific Tokyo."

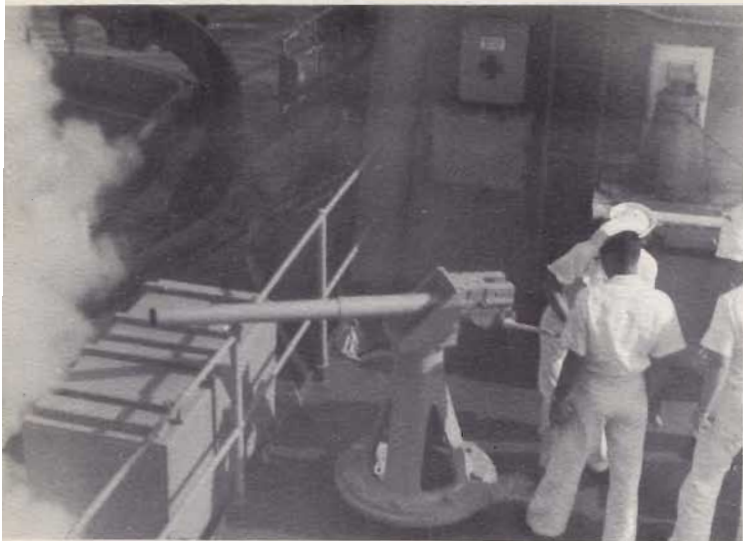

Bottom photo: Japanese wrestlers - - pretty rough boys.

J A P A N

"the land of the rising sun"

One of the memorable sights of our cruise was the size and majesty of Japan's famed Mount Fuji.

BLACK SHIP

MAHAN spent May 6-8 in Shimoda, Japan to commemorate the arrival of Commodore Matthew Perry and the opening of Japanese trade with the U. S. Activities of the festival were started by an 11 gun salute.

FESTIVAL

Both Americans and Japanese participated in the festival parade. Japanese marching units and bands and people in traditional costumes were joined members of the U.S. Armed Forces including the MAHAN marching unit.

MAHAN hosted over 2000 visitors, mostly Japanese school children, during our two days of open house. They chased all over the ship getting our autographs - but we loved'em all. We also played a softball game against the Shimoda all-stars. After an exchange of team momentos, the all-stars proceeded to teach us our own game and won 5-1.

Top photo: "The Sea Palace," floating restaurant. Bottom photo: Refugees from Red China prefer to live as "Squatters" here rather than behind the Bamboo Curtain.

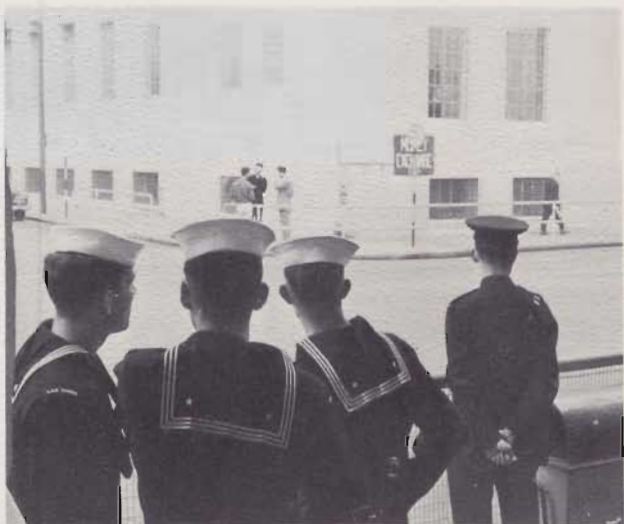

Many Hong Kong gals reminded us of our sisters at home.

LIBERTY CALL

After inspection and a brief walla-walla ride to Fenwick Pier we changed our money we were ready to take advantage of the many great bargains in Hong Kong.

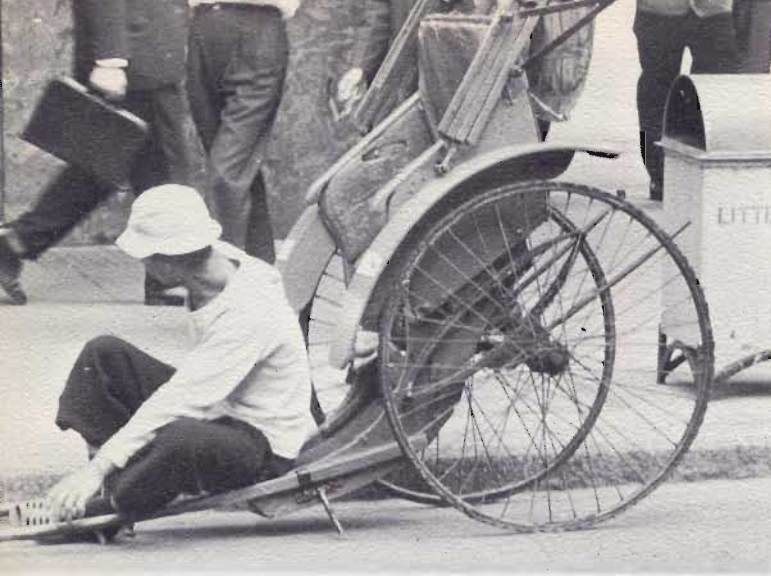

MARY SOO

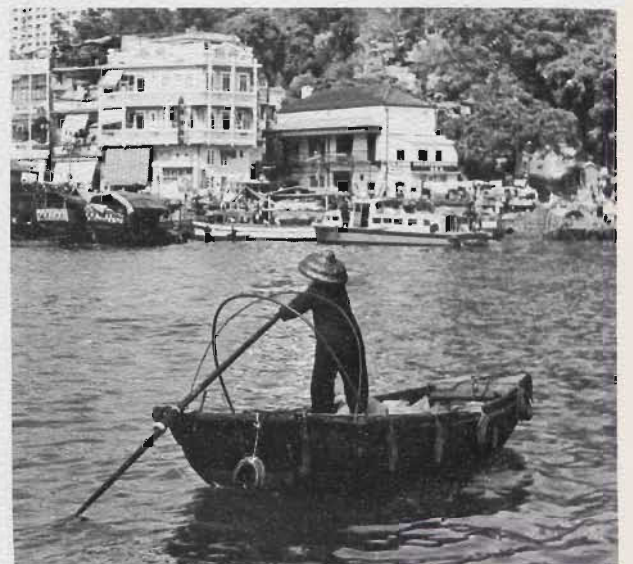

and her side cleaners visited the ship everyday and we also hosted some Hong Kong nurses to whom we donated blood.

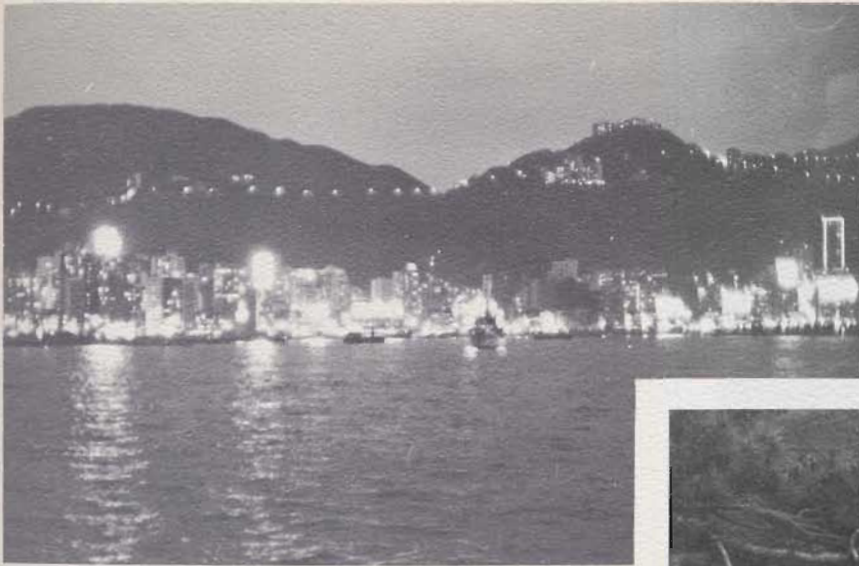

THESE SCENES OF HONG KONG

show the influence of Western culture and what remains of Eastern culture. Bright neon signs and traffic cops have come into being, but some of the ancient modes of transportation still remain.

The Old Man of the Sea

SHIPS'

This is a beauty contest?

She may not be much, but she's all ours.

BARBAQUE

C.O. offers his congratulations to the old Man and his Playmate.

MISCELLANY

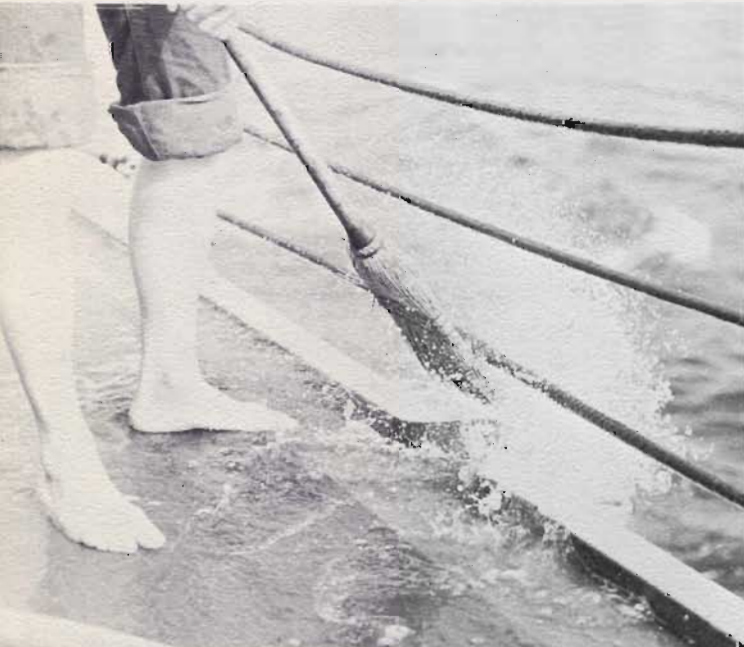

And did you hear the one about...

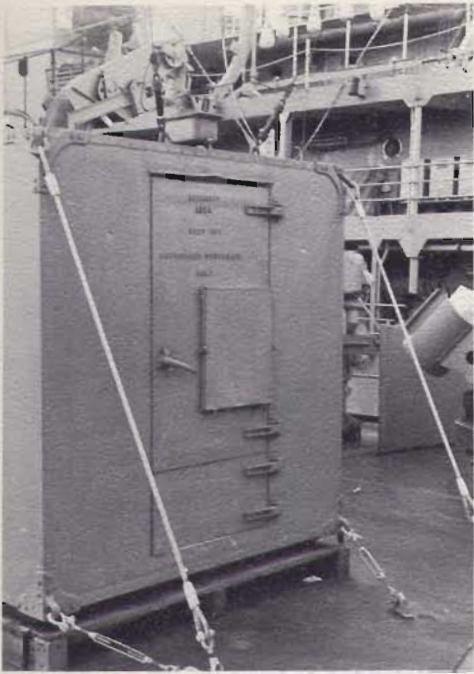

On the Street Where We Live.

It's a treat to beat your feet...

Yes sir, all guns manned and ready.

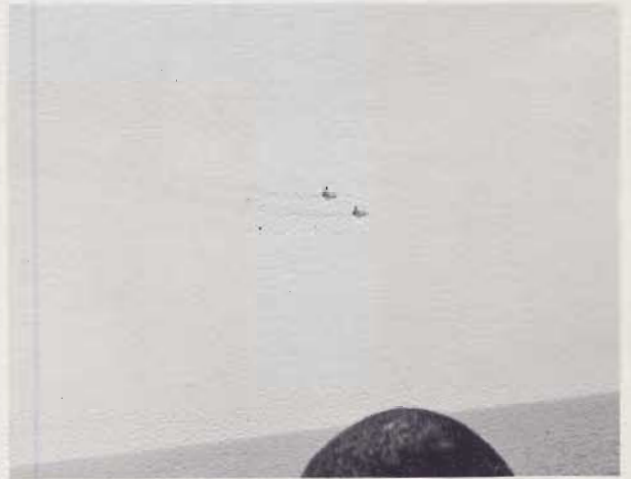

Spook Shack

Cannon Cockers delight

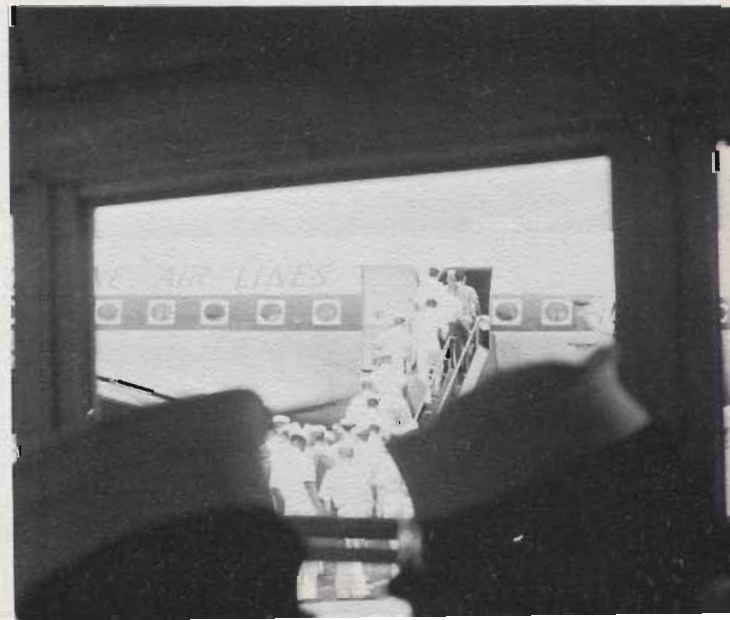

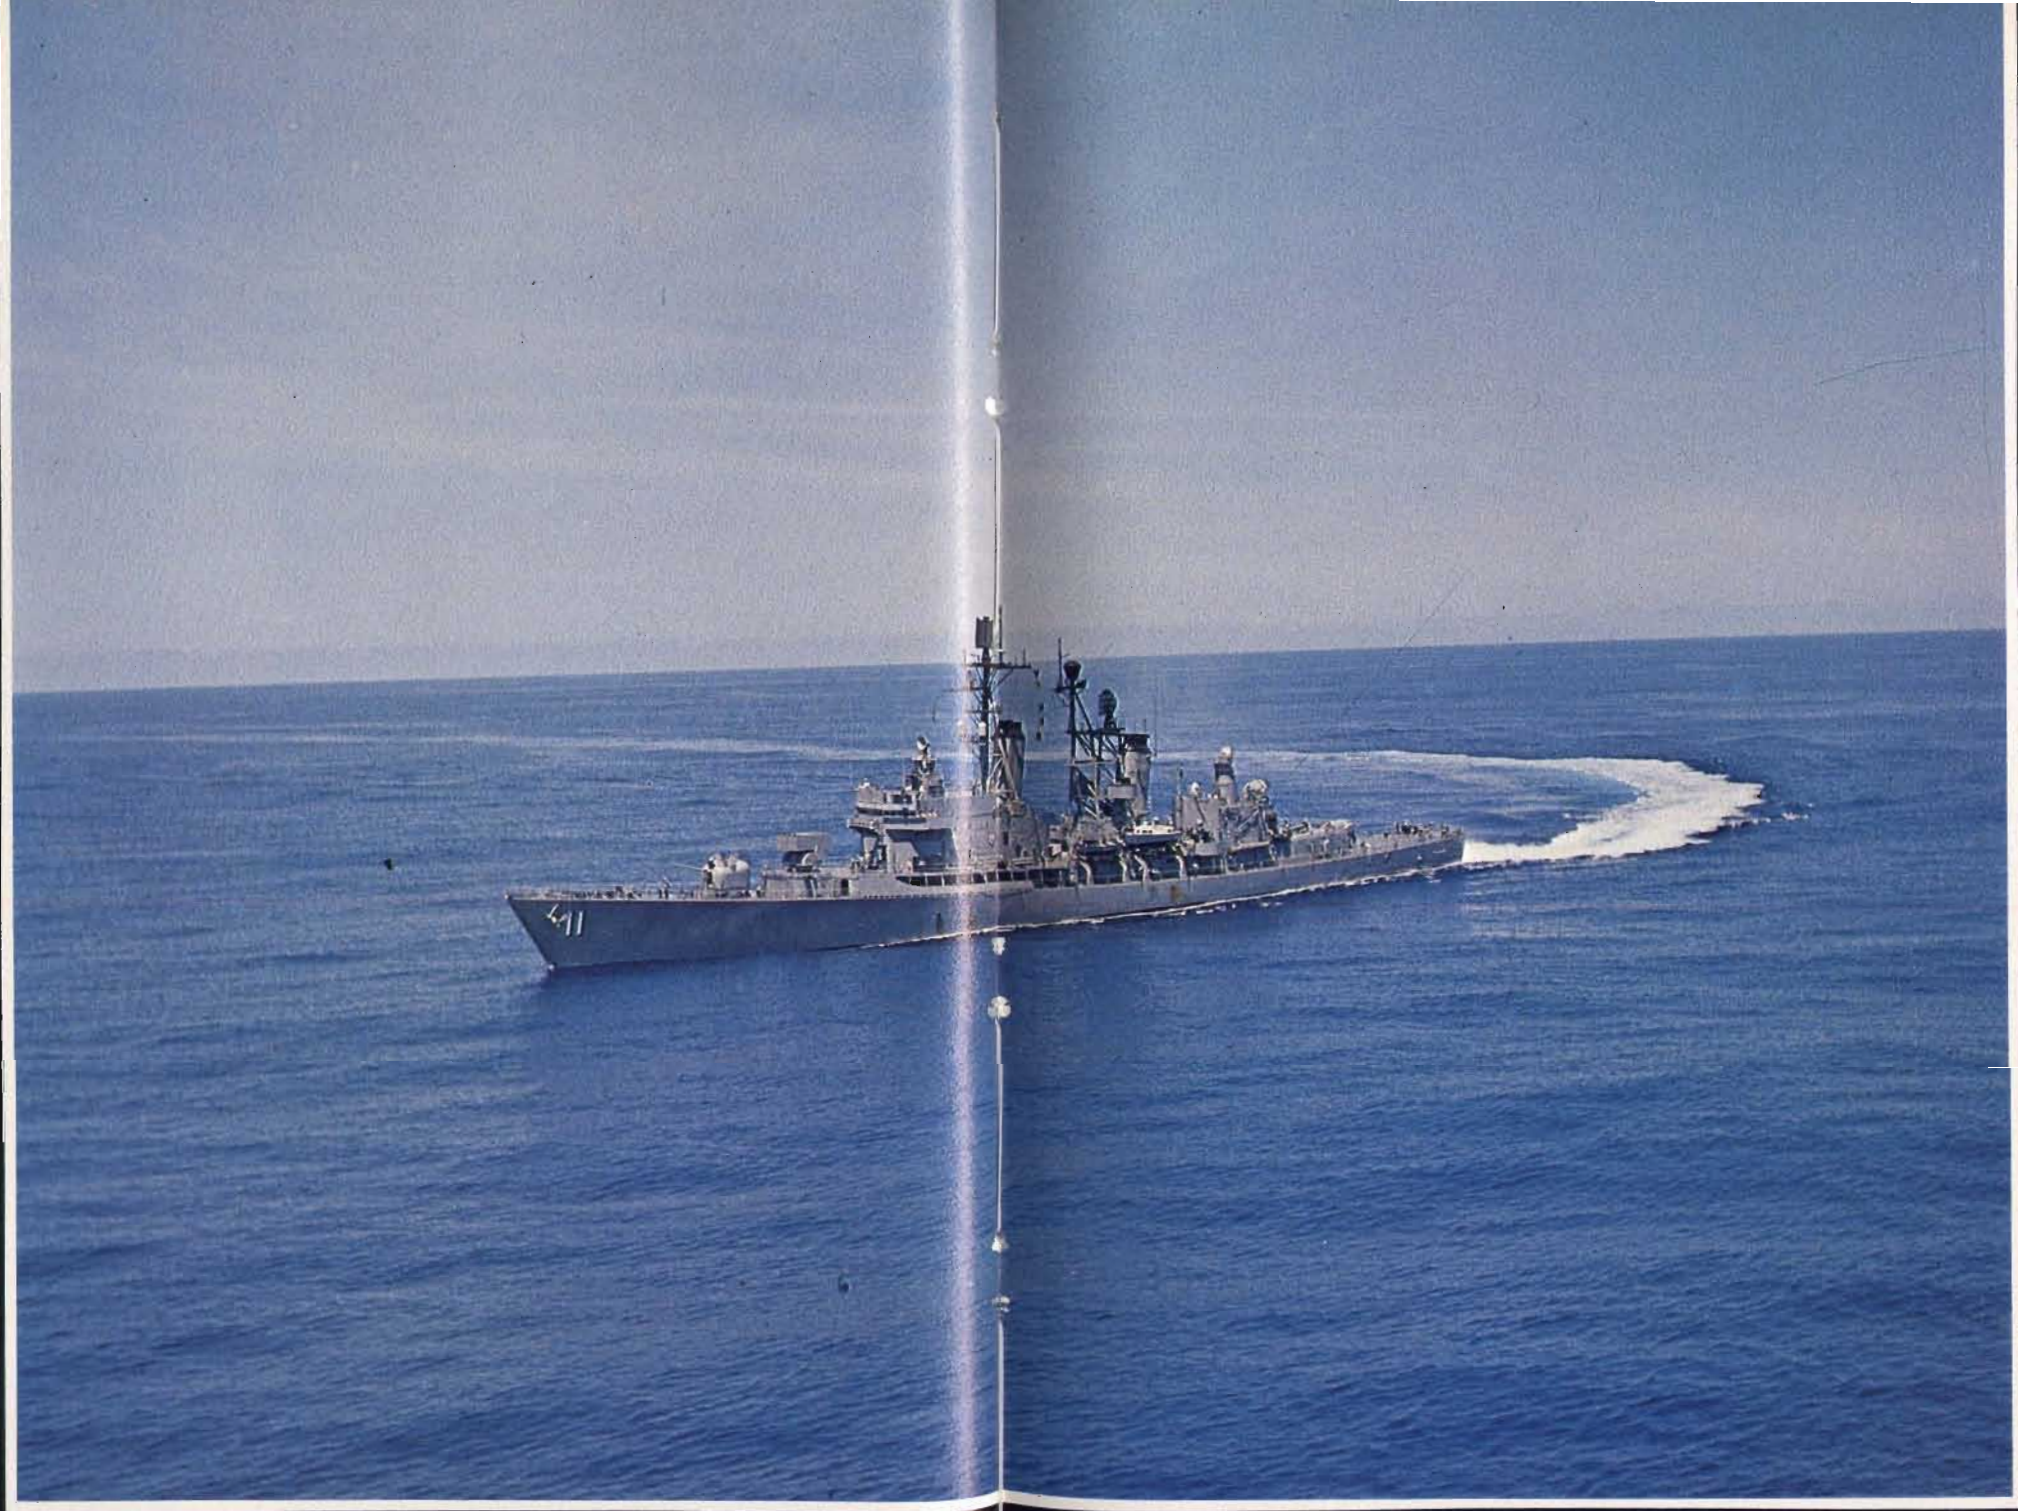

I sure hope they were ours.

Sayonara

Remember those Manila liberties?

Dear Fran.....

Robbie 780, where are you?

No one knows what the nose knows.

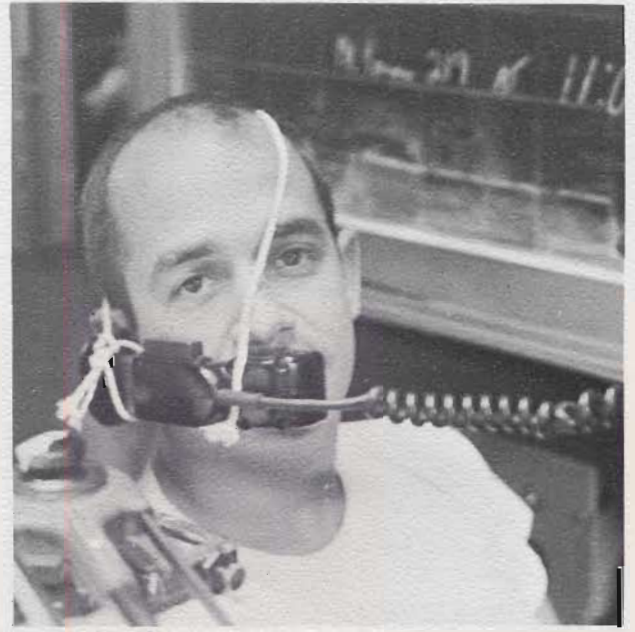

You've got it, Bissell.

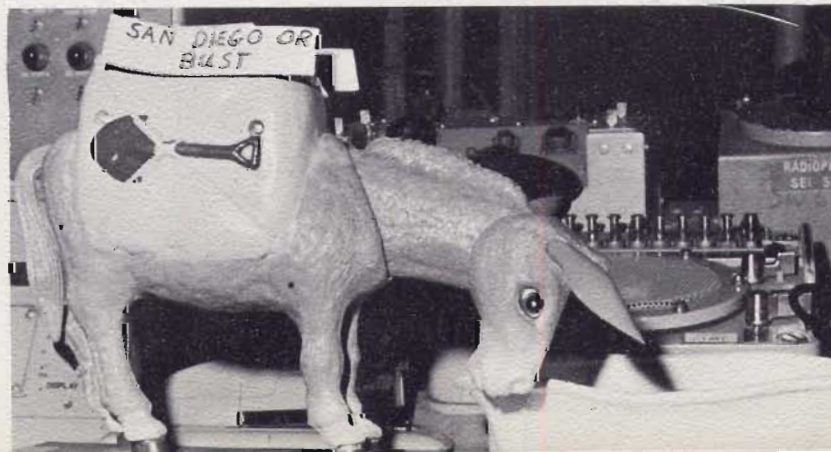

Who needs a haircut?

Wake me up when the watch is over.

I'll patent it as soon as we get back to the states.

Oops - belay my last.

Typical Holiday Routine

You better put that camera away before. . .

But, George, you're pulling on a life line.

Anybody know how to tie a bowline?

Just a couple deck apes in their tree.

Nothing to it, I can do it with my eyes closed.

Just wait till I'm a gunners' mate.

He took the money and dice and ran that way.

Yup, Bosun mate covers all that's masculine.

The ships' sophisticates.

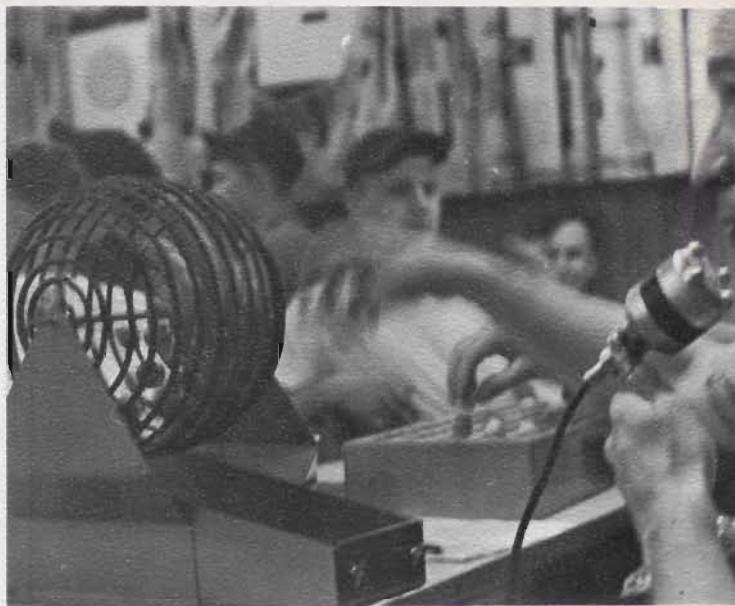

If I get my head caught in here one more time I'm going to cut it off.

RELAXATION

at sea was many things to many people. To some it was strumming a guitar in a quiet corner, or trying your luck at Bingo on the mess decks. To the officers it may have been a fancy dinner in the wardroom.

But to most of us it was just finding time to collect our thoughts; reflecting back on looking ahead to something that would help fight the ever present enemies of homesickness and boredom.
